Mission Statement

TCCOP is dedicated to reach out to help communities in need, regardless of race, or religion. We strive to empower school children and youth facing the challenges of poverty and homelessness, as well as fulfilling the needs of underserved families and seniors. Our aim is to serve as many community members as our resources allow while respecting their dignity and confidentiality

Goals

- Empower vulnerable children via food, education and specific needs to change the course of their future and break the cycle of poverty.
- Feed the needy via hands-on preparation ensuring health, promoting vegetarian principles, and preserving their dignity.
- Tend to the sick and elderly ensuring that they are not forgotten.
- Teach our youth to give back to the community via volunteering and donation opportunities to plant the seed of community involvement
- Assist during global crises as needed (earthquakes, floods, pandemics).
- Be a grass roots contributor at a personal level for identified needs.

have lost so much -
health, home, independence and often a spouse.

At the Jain Center of Southern California everyone is involved in volunteering. As shown even our little JCYC students eagerly help in preparing sandwiches. This activity helps in building strong morals in our young members.

Empowering students

This is Brandon, a homeless unaccompanied minor student. At the age of 16, Brandon moved into a garage paying $200 a month in rent, while working at the swap meet on the weekend earning $400 a month. With all these odds, he maintained a 3.7 GPA and has applied for college. He needed a computer in order to finish his schoolwork. TCCOP donated a laptop to empower him to accomplish his dream of majoring in computer science.

New Computer donated to a college bound student to help her educational need.

Tend to sick and elderly

One of our elderly patient's thoughts:

"I feel so special when you come to visit and offer words of encouragement; it energizes me.

You have helped me accept what I have...

You are a blessing in my life..."
